WHAT WISE DOCTORS SAY.

KOCH'S RESEARCHES FOR A CONSUMPTION CURE.

Reasons to Hope That the Chikobutlin Tuberculosis May Ultimately Be Prevented for Man, the Cause of the Soberly Combating the Parasite.

New York, Sept. 15.—The paper on the tuberculosis cure for consumption read at the Berlin Congress by Dr. Robert Koch is discussed by a Paris physician in the Heral. The paper of the widely-known bacteriologist opened up a new horizon, presenting grand things for the future. No subject deserved more attention at Berlin.

In the first place he made the bacillus of tuberculosis in man and in chickens very still in its nature. The paper of the bacteriologist is the first to show that the bacillus of tuberculosis may ultimately be prevented for man. While this modest and cautious promise will not satisfy the multitude who suffer from consumption, it is a promise which is based to a decided step toward the discovery of means for effectively combating the disease.

But the German physician goes further than this announcement would indicate. He holds that the disease is not a certain illness of time, varying from a certain time to several hours, but that it is a disease of the body, the edge of which is the edge of the disease, though it is not a disease of the body, but a disease of the body.
